Two mothers are discussing vaccines.

Choose the correct answers to complete their conversation.

Ann: Hi, have your kids been related to / vaccinated yet? I hear all the parental / pre-school kids have to be or they won't let them attend the daycare programs.

Kim: I'm not sure about the flu / fluent vaccine. I've heard it isn't that effective. A lot of people who got the disorder / shot last year still got sick.

Ann: True, but I don't think we have a choice. The vaccines are mandatory. Anyway, I really don't think you can question the effectiveness / victory of most vaccines. A lot of diseases that people used to die from have almost disappeared. The death rate / learning disability from those diseases has gone down deliberately / significantly. Why do you think most doctors are arbitrators / firm supporters of vaccines?

Kim: Vaccines may be effective, but I'm not so sure about their continuity / safety.

Ann: Oh, come on, vaccines are safe. How many people do you know who were harmed / hired by vaccines?

Kim: Well, none, personally, but there's plenty of evidence that some people have been.

Ann: Yes, but that's very rare. The benefits / tendencies of vaccines are much greater than the risks.

Kim: That may be true, but what if your kid was the one who was affected / cited? Would you still think the benefit was worth the risk? It could happen, you know. Even the drug companies admit that some people have negative reactions / unconstitutional rulings to vaccines.

Ann: Look, I'm not a doctor. I can't determine / reduce if my child could be at risk. My 15 attorney / pediatrician recommended the vaccine and I trust her, so I'm going to take her advice. Besides, we have no choice.

Kim: I'll probably agree in the end, but I still think parents have a right to choose. I don't think anyone has the authority / physical strength to force parents to consent / reverse to a medical treatment against their will / annually.

Ann: Well, you'd better decide soon. By this time next week, all the kids will have gotten their shots.
