THE POWER OF SOLITUDE

We're never really alone anymore. Technology has made interaction a click away and the world has gotten a lot smaller. At the same time, we've seen a movement towards collaboration in every facet of our work. Both of these movements have signaled a sign of the times, but they have also overshadowed one of the most important parts of our lives – solitude.

The power of being alone should not be dismissed. Despite all the external factors that are pulling us away from our ability to be alone, solitude has much to offer in all facets of our lives and a conscious effort should be made by every individual to experience it regularly. Here are just four typical of the many benefits that come from solitude.

Being alone allows you to be with your own thoughts and discover your own voice. Creativity flourishes in solitude. It allows you to dive into ideas, focus on problems, think outside the box, and reach deep within yourself and your imagination in a way that is not possible around others.

At the same time, solitude provides you with the perfect opportunity to be with yourself and truly understand who you are. Gaining this deeper understanding of yourself will help you in all facets of your life. And not only for yourself, but for others as well. Furthermore, this understanding can be applied to anything you are dealing with: your fears, your struggles, your demons – anything can be realized with some alone time for you to think.

A great part of solitude is that it also gives you a chance to relax and recover from your day to day stresses. Getting away from it all allows you to break the cycle and recover from your typical routine. It allows you to ground yourself, re-discover your goals, and remind yourself of what's important in your life. Having this space will make it all easier to be ready to get back to the grind when you return.
