

SOME / ANY

Theory

Some is mostly used in affirmative sentences. In question sentences, some is used only in two cases: if we offer something to someone, and if we ask for something.

- ★ I have some plums.
- ★ Would you like some chocolate?

Any performs the functions of any in interrogative and negative sentences.

- ★ I have some money.
- ★ I don't have any money.
- ★ Do you have any money?

Exercises

1. Choose the correct item.

- ★ Is there some / any butter in the fridge?
- ★ There isn't any / no bread in the bag.
- ★ There are some / any cucumbers on the table.
- ★ There are any / no potatoes in the box.
- ★ There is / are some cheese on the shelf.

2. Complete the sentences with some or any.

- ★ I think I'd like jam on my bread.
- ★ O, there is apple juice in the fridge.
- ★ There aren't tomatoes in the box.
- ★ Is there bread in the cupboard?
- ★ Sam usually has eggs for breakfast.
