It was a delightful, sunny day (next / last) Saturday, so Tom decided to go for a walk in the woods. He usually went for walks alone and he had never had any problems; however, he had no idea how different it would be this time.

He had been in the woods for a few hours (when / while) he realised that he was lost. It was the first time something like this had happened to him, because he had always been very careful. (As / As soon as) he was walking back and forth, trying to find the path out of the woods, he heard a strange sound, like somebody was behind him.

(While / As soon as) he turned around, he saw that it was a wolf! He nearly jumped out of his skin! It was normal for him to come across wild animals (while / before) he was walking in that area; however, he had never encountered a dangerous one (after / until) that moment.

(Then / By the time) he figured out what to do, the wolf had started coming towards him. Although he wanted to run, he stayed still because he remembered that in order to escape from a wolf, he had to stand facing it and slowly back away.

Luckily, it worked! (As / Until) Tom was walking backwards, the wolf turned around and left. He felt relieved and began running in the opposite direction. (At the time / Just then), he heard some voices. Fortunately, it was two hikers, who helped Tom find his way out of the woods.
