Balloons Harm Wildlife

Justin Williams was walking along a beach in Texas when he saw a turtle lying on the sand with the strings from a balloon wrapped tightly around its neck. He immediately cut the strings and took the turtle to a rescue centre. If he (1) didn't find / hadn't found it, the turtle would probably have died.

In the same way, balloons also pose a threat to birds. If a child lets go of a balloon, it (2) will usually carry / is usually carried away by the wind. And if the balloon lands in a tree, the string (3) might wrap / might have wrapped itself around the legs of a bird, which prevents the bird from flying. Unfortunately, the bird will die unless someone (4) helps / will help it. In other words, balloons are a deadly form of litter. If people stopped buying balloons for celebrations, the world (5) will be / would be a much safer place for wildlife.
