Greek villagers live longer

A report published today in the British Medical Journal claims that a Mediterranean diet will help you to live longer. Greek researchers have found that people who eat plenty of fruit, vegetables and olive oil, and low quantities of meat and dairy products will live to a healthy old age.

Ten years ago the researchers measured the food intake of 182 men and women aged over 70 in three Greek villages. This year they returned to look at the numbers who had died. They found that the villagers who ate a traditional diet had a 17 percent reduction in the chance of death compared to those who did not.

The traditional Mediterranean diet consists of a high consumption of olive oil, beans, cereals, vegetables and fruits, a low consumption of dairy products and meat – and a moderate consumption of alcohol.

Mediterranean diet is the way to eat and drink your way to health

More evidence that Mediterranean food and drink are good for the health has emerged in three studies published today.

They show that wine is better than beer or spirits at protecting against heart disease, that olive oil can prevent bowel cancer and that garlic lowers cholesterol levels.

One study found that wine drinkers are less likely to die from heart disease and cancer than people who prefer spirits or beer. A long-term study into 24,000 Danes showed that even heavy drinkers are less at risk if wine is their preferred drink.

Another study weighed up the evidence for garlic and cholesterol. It found that garlic lowers levels of harmful cholesterol, but that the evidence may not be as clear-cut as some garlic-lovers claim.

The third study looked at food preferences and bowel cancer in 28 countries, including Britain, the United States, Brazil and China. More than three quarters of the difference in rates of bowel cancer was explained by just three dietary factors. Meat and fish increased the risk, but a diet high in olive oil reduced it.

1. According to the first article, what is NOT the effect of the Mediterranean diet?
 - A. They will be healthy when they are old.
 - B. They will have a long life.
 - C. Men will live longer than women.
 - D. They will have less chance of death.

2. What does the Mediterranean diet include?
 - A. A lot of dairy products and meat
 - B. Some alcohol
 - C. A lot of olive oil, beans, cereals, vegetables and fruits
 - D. Both B and C
3. According to the second article, what are three healthy parts of the Mediterranean diet?
 - A. Wine, beer, spirits
 - B. Wine, olive oil, garlic
 - C. Wine, meat, fish
 - D. Wine, garlic, meat
4. What disease can wine drinkers avoid?
 - A. Cancer
 - B. Heart disease
 - C. Bowel cancer
 - D. Both A and B
5. What can garlic help?
 - A. Prevent bowel cancer
 - B. Reduce the risk of heart disease
 - C. Lower levels of cholesterol
 - D. Both A and C

Vietnamese Fried Spring Rolls

There is a dish that can be served all year round, and present in almost every menu of Vietnamese restaurant abroad: A dish that is so famous that many locals of Vietnam assume it as their own specialty and give it their own name such as: “Nem Ran” by northerners and “Cha Gio” by southerners.

A typical Vietnamese deep fried spring rolls plate

Fried spring roll was brought to Hanoi from the Southern part of Vietnam and this dish has rapidly become a favorite one of Hanoian, and to express the affection as well as to remember the real origin of the dish, people here call it “Nem Sai Gon”.

Unlike popular myth, Vietnamese do not eat fried spring rolls with rice everyday. In fact it is a preferred food on special occasions such as Tet and other family festivities. Spring rolls not always go along with rice but also seen with round noodle in the mouth-watering bún nem dish.

Spring Rolls served with Bun to make the savoury Bun Nem

Ingredients used for the fried spring roll are different depending each local but usually it comprises of lean minced pork, sea crabs or unshelled shrimps, edible mushroom, dried onion, duck/chicken eggs, pepper, salt and different kinds of seasoning. There are also special variants of the traditional pork-based roll, such as Crab spring rolls or Nem Cua Be.

Whichever they are, all ingredients are mixed thoroughly before being wrapped with rice paper into small rolls. These rolls are then fried in boiling oil. The cooked rolls are usually garnished with fresh lettuce and herbs.

About Dipping Sauce:

Foreigners may not know that the bowl of fish sauce is not the same for every dish of Vietnamese meal. Each dish have a specific demand of dipping sauce and with fried spring roll it requires a good hand to make one. A quality dipping sauce bowl for this dish must be the harmonious combination of flavors such as lemon juice, sugar, chili, pepper and fish sauce.

1. Fried Spring Roll is a very _____ specialty in both the North and the South of Vietnam.
2. It is not only served with rice but also with _____ to make bun nem dish.
3. It consists of pork, _____, shrimps, mushroom, eggs and different kinds of seasoning.
4. Spring rolls are made from all the _____ wrapped with rice paper and fried in boiling oil.
5. The _____ is a mixture of lemon juice, sugar, chili, pepper and fish sauce.

Task 3: Read the text and answer the questions with NO MORE THAN SIX WORDS.

In northern Vietnam, a colder climate limits the production and availability of spices. As a result, the foods there are often less spicy than those in other regions. Black pepper is used in place of chilies as the most popular ingredient to produce spicy flavors. In general, northern Vietnamese cuisine is not bold in any particular taste - sweet, salty, spicy, bitter, or sour. Most northern Vietnamese foods feature light and balanced flavors that result from subtle combinations of many different flavoring ingredients. The use of meats such as pork, beef, and chicken were relatively limited in the past. Freshwater fish, crustaceans, and mollusks, such as prawns, squids, shrimps, crabs, clams, and mussels, are widely used. Many notable dishes of northern Vietnam are crab-centered (e.g., bún riêu). Fish sauce, soy sauce, prawn sauce, and limes are among the main flavoring ingredients. Being the cradle of Vietnamese civilization, northern Vietnam produces many signature dishes of Vietnam, such as bún riêu and bánh cuốn, which were carried to central and southern Vietnam through Vietnamese migration. Other famous Vietnamese dishes that originated from the North, particularly from Hanoi include "bún chả" (rice noodle with grilled marinated pork), phở gà (rice noodle with chicken), chả cá Lã Vọng (rice noodle with grilled fish).

The abundance of spices produced by central Vietnam's mountainous terrain makes this region's cuisine notable for its spicy food, which sets it apart from the two other regions of Vietnam where foods are mostly not spicy. Once the capital of the last dynasty of Vietnam, Huế's culinary tradition features highly decorative and colorful food, reflecting the influence of ancient Vietnamese royal cuisine. The region's cuisine is also notable for its sophisticated meals consisting of many complex dishes served in small portions. Chili, peppers and shrimp sauces are among the frequently used ingredients. Some Vietnamese signature dishes produced in central Vietnam are bún bò Huế and bánh khoai.

The warm weather and fertile soil of southern Vietnam create an ideal condition for growing a wide variety of fruits, vegetables, and livestock. As a result, foods in southern Vietnam are often vibrant and flavorful, with liberal uses of garlic, shallots, and fresh herbs. Sugar is added to food more than in the other regions. The preference for sweetness in southern Vietnam can also be seen through the widespread use of coconut milk in southern Vietnamese cuisine. Vast shorelines make seafood a natural staple for people in this region. Some signature seafood dishes from southern Vietnam include bánh khọt and bún mắm.

1. What ingredient is used to make northern Vietnamese food spicy?
2. What kinds of sauces are the main flavoring ingredients in the North?
3. How are most of the foods in central Vietnam?
4. What ingredients are mainly used in the dishes of the Central region?
5. What do the southern people like adding to their food?
