Young as I am, I'm a realist, and I know it's absolutely <sup>1</sup>_____ to have humility when starting out in the working world. I knew my first job after university was <sup>2</sup>_____ to be neither easy nor personally rewarding. I knew that it may <sup>3</sup>_____ be my <sup>4</sup>_____ to carry out menial tasks. But it's worse than I foresaw. First of all, we're <sup>5</sup>_____ to work 12-hour shifts; at the interview they said this was highly <sup>6</sup>_____ except during holiday periods. Physically, I don't have the <sup>7</sup>_____ to work 60-hour weeks. Secondly, I'm translating documents from English to French, Spanish and Japanese – and the only one of those I am <sup>8</sup>_____ of translating into competently is Japanese. Finally, we're <sup>9</sup>_____ to take a lunch break away from the premises, we are only <sup>10</sup>_____ to eat outside in the courtyard. All this will <sup>11</sup>_____ lead to me quitting. I think there's a strong <sup>12</sup>_____ that it will affect my long-term health. Frankly, I'm not willing to risk that.
