My grandfather gave me this photo of his house. It's black and white and at the beginning I didn't like it. Then my grandfather started describing the house using colours and everything changed.

This house had two floors and five rooms. On the ground floor there were the kitchen, the living room and my grandparents' bed room. In the kitchen there was a brown table, a yellow sinks and a black and red fridge, and a cooker. In the living room there was a red armchair next to the fireplace and one blue armchair next to the red and blue sofa. Next to the fireplace there was a small TV. My grandparents' bedroom was very small, the bed was next to the window, and it was brown and the pillows on it were red. The curtains were deep red and the bedside table next to the window was brown and on there was a black lamp.

On the first floor there were the dining room and the bathroom. In the dining room there was a dining table covered with an orange table cloth with two chairs. Behind the table there was a purple fireplace. Next to the table there was a big, green cupboard. In the bathroom there was a big green and blue bathtub and white and blue curtains in front of the window, a sink and a toilet. I think it was a cozy and a quite house.
