1. Read the following text about Magazines and Newspaper. Then drag and drop the differences and similarities of them.

A magazine contains facts and fiction. It contains essays, poems, stories, articles, and recipes. Some of the articles present the writer's opinion about an important topic. The articles in a magazine are longer than in a newspaper. Magazines are not published every day; they are published every week or every month. Magazines have lots of colorful illustrations on quality paper and are attractive for their readers. Newspapers do not have as many illustrations, and the paper is not the same quality. Both magazines and newspapers have many advertisements. Magazines usually focus on one topic.
