We're called Integration Now, and we're a local charity that works to help immigrants to adapt to local life. But we would also like local people to meet immigrants, go to know them and share their cultures and traditions—without banners, without slogans. We believe that life together is going to be richer and more fun that way.

2

We're here because when you move to another country, it can be very difficult to adapt. You will probably have language problems; you'll often have to ask for help; your children will go to schools with children from different communities. Even the food will be different! so we'd like to help people integrate into their new community.

3

We're a group of volunteers who work from a small office. We give information and advice to immigrants. We take part in local events so that local people can meet immigrants. Our food festivals are especially popular! And we organize language exchange sessions: you can help people learn your language, and they will teach you some of theirs. Next year we're going to move to a bigger space for our own events.

You don't have to give donations! Come and spend some time with us. Meet some interesting people.
