Who was Jack the Ripper?

In 1888, London England, Jack the Ripper killed at least five women in London, mutilating their bodies. A number of letters, supposedly from the Ripper, were sent to police taunting officers' efforts to find the Ripper. (Whether any of them were actually written by the Ripper is a matter of debate among scholars.) The name "Jack the Ripper" comes from the letters he sent to the police.

Needless to say, the Ripper was never found, and over the years, dozens of people have been brought up as possible candidates. The mystery of the Sphinx

ACTIVITY 3: Read the text and answer the questions:

One of the world's most studied monuments is the Sphinx, which is located close to the Great Pyramid, sixteen kilometers from Cairo in Egypt. It is made of limestone. Carved in ancient times out of a single piece of limestone over sixty metres long and twenty meters high, it weighs hundreds of tons. This extraordinary monument consists solely of the head of a man and the body of a crouching lion, a combination which suggest strength and wisdom. Over the years, some of its facial features have sustained damage.

The smile, which people describe mysterious, is in fact the result of erosion rather than design, and the nose, which has long since been broken away, was probably the unfortunate victim of invading soldiers' target practice. At one time there was a serpent on its forehead and a royal beard, a fragment of which exists in a museum.

But who built this monument which unlike most of the others guarding significant places, is not part of a pair but stands alone? Most Egyptologists agree that it was built by Pharaoh Khafre 5,000 years ago. However, some recent commentators have speculated that it belonged to a much older civilization, which disappeared in a legendary flood that is supposed to have destroyed everything in the world over 7,000 years ago. They have tried to demonstrate that the weathering of the Sphinx was caused by water rather than wind and sand, and one has even suggested that it may have been built on a much older site about 12,500 years ago. Whatever its origins there is no doubt that to the Egyptians, the Sphinx represents the very essence of their country's magnificent culture.
