African Elephants

Some elephants live in Africa. They are called African elephants. They live mostly in woods and on plains.

African elephants are the biggest land animals on Earth. They have big ears, too. African elephants use their ears to cover up and stay cool in the heat. They also cool off with their trunks. They suck water up into their trunks and give themselves a shower.

African elephants also have tusks. Tusks are big teeth. Both males and females have tusks. They use their tusks to dig for food and water.
