

Against the law: Demonstrative pronouns this, that, these, those

When you want to talk about something depending on quantity and distance you use this, that, these or those. For example,

If a dog is near, you say 'this dog'

If a dog is far, you say 'that dog'

If there is more than one, then you use 'these' if they are near and 'those' if they are far from you. For example,

'these dogs are very near' -- 'those dogs are very far'

Exercises

A. Complete with 'this' or 'these'.

1. _____ police officer is doing his job.
2. _____ wallet has money.
3. _____ people are here just for the show.
4. _____ dog is owned by the police.
5. _____ three men robbed a bank.

B. Look at the picture and describe what you see with 'this' or 'that'. Consider how near or far the object is from the detective. Look at the example.

1. " this is a bank."	2.	3.

4.	5.	6.