Simon Smith is a firefighter who's been putting out fires for the past ten years. We had a meeting with firefighter Smith who talked about the worst disaster he had to deal with.

It was a cyclone that hit the sea of the city where he works. He had to save people from a building that was about to collapse. He says:

"There was a small fire that was caused by the cyclone. It started on the second floor, then it spread to the whole building, the flames were burning, causing a lot of panic!

I was able to save everyone. There were 30 survivors including 10 children, who were able to escape in the last 15 minutes. After that, the door was completely blocked by the fire. The sad thing is that these fires have moved to the forest, causing wildfires and killing lots of animals," says Smith.

Thanks to the heroic work of such firefighters who keep us safe, we are able to save the lives of hundreds of people.
