Guinness Book of World Records

by various authors

First published in Great Britain in 1955, a new edition is made every year. This book contains information about world records of all kinds. Some of the most popular categories include world records in sports, nature, movies, TV, music, and human achievements. With color photographs and lots of fun facts, this book is popular with adults and children.

One Hundred Years of Solitude

by Gabriel García Márquez (Colombia)

This novel tells the story of the town of Macondo. It starts with the founding of the town by a member of the Buendia family and ends over one hundred years later with its destruction by a severe hurricane. The story follows six generations of the Buendia family and witnesses their passions and emotions, strengths and weaknesses, and successes and failures.

Long Walk to Freedom

by Nelson Mandela (South Africa)

Winner of the Nobel Peace Prize and the first democratically elected president of South Africa, Nelson Mandela tells his life story in this moving book. He recalls his childhood, learning about black-white relations, and his belief that all people, black and white, must be free. He wrote much of the book secretly during the twenty-seven years he spent in prison. Mandela finishes his story with the day he became president—a day he said his "long walk to freedom" had just begun.

The Old Man and the Sea

by Ernest Hemingway (U.S.)

This simple but powerful novel is about Santiago, an old Cuban fisherman who hasn't caught a fish in eighty-four days. He goes farther out into the water and finally hooks a huge fish. But the fish is very strong and pulls the boat. For two days Santiago fights and tries to control the fish. He admires its strength and courage, but won't let it go. It's a classic story of a hero who will not be defeated.
