Current mood: I'm so (1) _____!

This afternoon I had my birthday party and all my close friends came to my house. We were playing some games when Dad came back from work. He looked (2) _____ when he saw T's dyed hair and ripped jeans. I think T. felt uncomfortable, so he said goodbye to all of us and left. After the party, Dad told me T. could be a bad (3) _____ on me and I should stop being friends with him. He said a good student should not dye his hair and should dress properly. I think Dad is being unreasonable. He should not judge my friends by their looks. T. is one of the best students in my class, but he wants to look (4) _____. His dream is to become a famous actor and film director. He is very (5) _____ and has already acted in a few films. I can't stop being friends with someone just because my father doesn't like them. I wish Dad stopped judging my friends by their (6) _____. How can I make him understand this?
