1  Posted by: Will, 11, London This is Shepherd's Bush market in London. It's more than 100 years old! You can buy food from all around the world here. There are some packets of tea from India and jars of English jam next to bottles of Spanish olive oil. You can buy falafels and Nepalese food. The smell is wonderful!	2  Posted by: Kate, 12, North Wales My family goes to this market on the second Saturday of every month. It's a traditional farmers' market where local farmers sell lots of different things. There are vegetables, cakes and fruit pies. My favourite stall sells cheese. You can try different types without paying.	Exchange student post 3  Posted by: May, 12, Thailand I'm from Bangkok and I really like the Amphawa Floating market. It's 50km outside Bangkok and people sell food and flowers from wooden boats. It gets busy so it's best to go early in the morning. I go there a lot because my uncle has got a shop next to the canal.
 Dan says: I love Indian curry and Chinese noodles. Can you buy these dishes at the market?	 Nina says: Yum! I'd like a fruit pie, please. When I go to a new place I always try the local food.	 Jake says: Wow! A floating market! It sounds amazing. I want to go!
