

Relative Clauses

Defining Relative Clauses

We use the Defining clauses to give essential information about the noun.

We use that or who for people, that or which for things, when for times, where for places, whose to express possession.

We don't use commas.

Which, who and that can be omitted when they refer to an object.

That is the girl (who/that) I met in the casting last week.

Whose cannot be omitted.

If the relative pronoun carries a preposition, this last one follows the verb.

The girl (who/that) I was waiting for is my daughter.

Example:

Frankenstein is a horror novel about a scientist who creates a monster.

Non-defining Relative Clauses

We use the Non-defining clauses to give extra information about the noun.

We use who for people, which for things, when for times, where for places, whose to express possession.

We don't use the relative pronoun that.

We use commas to separate the relative clause from the rest of the sentence.

The relative pronouns cannot be omitted.

Example:

Frankenstein, which is a horror novel, is about a scientist who creates a monster.

Relative Clauses

Decide if the following sentences are Defining or Non-Defining.
Complete with a suitable relative pronoun.

1. A person job is acting is an actor.
2. A video shop is a place you can rent some films.
3. Dan's sister, lives in Hollywood, is an actress.
4. My father's car, he bought in 1991, is still working.
5. Frankenstein (or, The Modern Prometheus), is a horror book, was written by Mary Shelley.
6. Stephenie Meyer is the author books made into film adaptations, Twilight saga.
7. The most popular animation films are from The Walt Disney Pictures main character is Mickey Mouse.
8. Birdman, director is Mexican, won the Oscar for the best film.
9. This is the year the last part of the Hunger Games will release.
10. Eddie Redmayne, won an Oscar for the best actor, is the protagonist of The Theory of Everything.
11. I can't stand horror films are awful.
12. Big Bang Theory, is about the lives of four scientists, is a comedy series.
13. Hollywood is the place I would like to live some day.
14. In my opinion, One Song is a film soundtrack is outstanding.
15. Walking Dead is a horror series isn't suitable for all audiences.
16. New Zealand is the country The Hobbit and The Lord of the Rings were filmed.