Unique Ways to Travel

If you are concerned about pollution from cars, trains, and buses, check out some old, but environmentally friendly, forms of transportation.

In Venice, Italy, people use boats called gondolas to get around. Gondolas are just like taxis except they travel on water instead of land. The gondolier, or driver, uses an oar to guide the gondola through the water. Gondoliers also sing or play a musical instrument if you pay them extra money.

In Bangkok, Thailand, the Sky Train is a popular way to travel. The Sky Train is an electric-powered train that carries people above the city. The traffic in Bangkok is very bad, so the Sky Train is the fastest and cleanest way to travel. The Sky Train can transport 50,000 people per hour, and it offers air-conditioned, clean trains to ride.

In very cold climates, people get around using sleds pulled by strong dogs. Usually, eight to ten dogs are paired up in teams of two. Then they are hooked up to a sled. The sled driver, also called the musher, stands on the sled and guides the dogs through the snow. While most people consider riding on a dog sled a sport, some people still use dog sleds to carry firewood or food to rural areas.
