Wendy was excited. Christmas _____ (come) and she _____ (be) a good girl all year, so she expected many splendid gifts from Santa. Two months earlier, she _____ (write) to him to him to describe all the toys and clothes and other important things that she would like. Yes, it _____ (be) a very long list, but everyone _____ (know) how magical Santa was so there should not be a problem.

Wendy _____ (not clean) the bathroom, though. Her dad had asked her to clean it, again and again, but it was disgusting in there, and it _____ (always get) messy again anyway. She never _____ (like) cleaning the bathroom, and as Christmas approached they received an especially large number of guests. It was getting worse and worse.

On Christmas Eve, Wendy's dad _____ (visit) the bathroom and screamed. "Something _____ (move) in there!" he said, pointing at a pile of dirty rags. Wendy saw it, too. "Daddy, daddy, get rid of it, please!" she _____ (beg). But her father was too afraid.

Together, they went to Wendy's mum, and pleaded with her to deal with the monster in the bathroom. She tutted at them. So silly. But when she got to the bathroom, and saw the state of the mess, and saw something move, she _____ (scream) too. She slammed the door shut and told her family, "Whatever it is, we must _____ (not go) in there." Everyone was too afraid to disagree. So they sealed the bathroom door and ignored the problem.

On Christmas morning, Wendy _____ (rush) down the stairs and excitedly clambered under the glittering Christmas tree. The room was strangely empty, though. No stocking filled with treats, and only a handful of wrapped boxes – all labelled for mum and dad. Where _____ (be) her presents?

"Well," her father told her, "Look, Santa _____ (leave) a note. It _____ (say) that as you _____ (not complete) your chores, your presents _____ (be) left in the bathroom. If you want to get them, you must clean up the mess."

Wendy _____ (have) no choice. If Santa _____ (say) it, it had to be done. And so she braced herself and determined to clean that bathroom. She put on gloves, took up a broom and a mop and a bucket of disinfectant and _____ (charge) into the mess. It looked awful. It _____ (smell) foul. It _____ (feel) weird. But the mess had to go. After a hard morning's work, Wendy stepped back and marvelled at what she _____ (do). The bathroom was glistening clean, beautiful and empty once more. And whatever had moved in there before was gone. But she realised, with the room now bare, there were no presents in there. _____ Santa _____ (lie)?

Wendy went downstairs to demand an answer from her parents, ready to shout and fight and scream. She stormed into the living room, broom raised above her head, and _____ (freeze). There, under the tree, was a landscape of presents. Boxes of all shapes and size, wrapped in paper of every colour. Big presents, small presents, bows, bags; all she could dream of. She _____ (be) a good girl, after all.
