Simone de Beauvoir

Angela Davis:

Emmeline Pankhurst

Gloria Steinem

Aptly referred to as the "Mother of Feminism," she led the women's liberation movements throughout the '60s and '70s.

She had some intense tactics to ensure that the vote for women was granted, including hunger strikes, chaining herself to rails and even violence.

A trailblazing voice for black women her role in political protests have been deemed controversial

She wrote "The Second Sex", credited with paving the way for modern feminism.
