My travel diary: Three days in Paris

Day one – Fashionable Paris

I _____ (wake up) really early and _____ (take) a train from Amsterdam. It _____ (be) a rainy grey Monday morning and I feel like I _____ (be) the only person in the city. Paris is always packed with tourists, but this time its streets _____ (be) almost empty. I _____ (have got) a nice and delicious lunch in one of the restaurants with a view of the Opera Garnier. And decide to spend my afternoon exploring some of the famous vintage shops in the Marais neighbourhood. There I meet Francois, my guide, and we _____ (walk) around these picturesque streets filled with small cute stores, cafes, and restaurants. The whole area _____ (have got) such a cool alternative vibe. Francois _____ (be not) well today, so I go back to my hotel early.

Day two – Impressionists' Paris

Day two is reserved for learning more about and exploring French Impressionism in Paris. I take a tour around the Montmartre neighbourhood and _____ (learn) more about the Impressionist painters that used to live and work there. I meet my guide below the Sacré-Coeur Church, and we _____ (go) to Montmartre where he _____ (show) me some of the places that were important for the Impressionist movement in Paris.

We take a short break and we _____ (order) some typical food. I _____ (eat) some tarte tatin and Francois _____ (not eat) anything, because he _____ (not feel) very well again. He only has got tea.

Day three – Modernist Paris

My last day in Paris _____ (start) with one of the best breakfasts and the most amazing coffees I have ever had in my life. I have breakfast at Carette close to Trocadero. I _____ (think) I have definitely found my new favourite place in Paris.

I join a walking tour called the 'Modernist Architecture' to learn something about it. During the tour, we _____ (see) some of the modernist buildings, _____ (learn) about the movement and _____ (visit) Foundation Le Corbusier and the modern architecture exhibition in the Palais de Chaillot. It _____ (be) so interesting!

After the tour and a quick lunch, it is time to _____ (catch) a train back to Amsterdam. My three days in Paris _____ (be) dedicated to art, mostly Impressionism and modern architecture. I also try to learn more about some of its famous former citizens like Monet, Renoir, Cezanne and Coco Chanel.

However, I realize how travelling alone _____ (not be) bad at all. And that French _____ (be) some of the nicest people out there. Well, my next visit should be dedicated to learning how to enjoy life like a Parisian. Also, I ask myself _____ I _____ (enjoy) my life like that?

Au revior! Until the next time, my dear city!
