Ethical clothing

Think about the clothes in your wardrobe. Do you know where they were made? Do you know who made them? These days, more and more people want to know where their clothes were [32] _____, what the conditions were like for the workers in the factory, and if any animals were hurt or killed in order to make the clothing. They know that some factories in very poor countries [33] _____ a tendency to make very young children work hours on end, and they're [34] _____ not to encourage this. In short, they want to be sure that their clothing was produced ethically.

Because of this, some clothing retailers – the shops and online stores that sell clothes – insist [35] _____ finding out how their suppliers make their clothes. If they discover that they're not produced ethically, they refuse to buy them. This way, their customers don't have to worry. And it seems that [36] _____ of customers appreciate that.

So when you grow out of your clothes, or your current pair of shoes [37] _____ out, perhaps you'll ask a few questions before you buy their replacement. You'll feel [38] _____ of having made a difference.
