Lot of people associated the Ukelele with Hawaii.

Now, of course, it is really popular in Hawaii but the real story is that the Ukelele came from Portugal. And its name was “machete.

It was in 1.897 when 419 Portuguese inmigrants from Madeira arrived to Hawaii. They went to Hawaii to work in sugar cane and pineapple fields.

To celebrate the long trip, four months by boat from Portugal to Hawaii, they started playing the “machete”. The Hawaians called the instrument Ukelele.

Hawaians loved the musical instrument and quickly started to be part of Hawaiian Culture. One of the reasons was that the King Kalakaua loved the instrument.

In the 20th Century Ukelele started to be very popular. Today is directly related to the Hawaian culture.
