Recycling

The growth of the world population has resulted in an incredible amount of waste, threatening the whole planet and all its species. Did you know that billions of pounds of plastic and glass end up in the world's oceans every year? What is shocking is that plastic and glass waste, whether it is thrown in the water or in any other natural environment, can kill any bird, fish or land animal that eats it. Did you also know that the paper we throw away each year comes from about 640 million trees? So before we throw all of our rubbish in the same garbage bin or in the street, we should seriously think of the difference recycling can make to the environment.

What should we do then to avoid polluting the environment with our rubbish? First of all, we should buy products that we can recycle, such as aluminium, glass, paper or plastic products. All recyclable products can save us energy, resources and money. For example, aluminium and glass are 100% recyclable and can be recycled over and over again. When we turn recycled aluminium into new products, we can save up to 95% more energy than when we make completely new ones. Also, the same oil that we need to produce energy is used to make plastic water bottles. However, buying products that can be recycled is one step towards preserving our planet. The next step is to buy products that have already been recycled. Finally, another way to help the planet is to buy only what we need. The fewer things we buy, the less waste we make and the less damage we cause to the environment.

Recycling does not only make our world a better place to live in. It also creates a lot of jobs. There are as many as 26 different kinds of recycling businesses which need a large number of people to collect what we throw in the recycling bins, transport it to factories and turn it into new products that are also cheaper. There are also a lot of markets which sell recyclable materials and they need skilled people to make their business successful. ..... all recycling businesses play an important role in reducing unemployment in our society.
