

Name: _____

An intensifier is an adverb that comes before an adjective or another adverb meaning and emphasize its effect.

A. Read the text about extreme sports and underline the intensifiers.

Extreme sports are different from average sports because they are incredibly risky. Either you perform the sport at an extremely fast pace or its location is incredibly dangerous. In order to do an extreme sport completely safely, you should be really experienced at it.

Free solo climbing is an example of a very dangerous extreme sport. It involves climbing incredibly steep cliffs that can be thousands of feet high. The thing about this sport is that you climb without any equipment. That's totally crazy, right? Those who have done this sport have said that the only way to do it successfully is by climbing very slowly and remaining totally focused on every move you make.

For the adrenaline junkies, extreme sports are very attractive and intriguing. But, if you're thinking about taking up an extreme sport, think very hard about the challenges involved.
