  - 13 On 19 July, Gertrude Benham found out she had made a mistake.
  - 14 Gertrude Benham decided to climb Mount Heejee with Charles Fay on 20 July.
  - 15 Charles Fay blamed his guide when he failed to reach the top of Mount Heejee.
  - 16 Gertrude Benham took a different route up Mount Heejee from Charles Fay.
  - 17 Gertrude Benham knew Hans Kaufmann had a plan to choose a slow route up Mount Heejee.
  - 18 The mountain which was named after Charles Fay was the one he had first chosen.
  - 19 Charles Fay's grandson followed a different route from his grandfather up Mount Fay.
  - 20 The hut named after Charles Fay is still used by climbers.

Climbing mountains

Gertrude Benham was born in England in 1867. She had made 130 climbs in the European Alps before going to the Canadian Rocky Mountains in 1904, where she spent the summer climbing. In 1904, the paths of Gertrude Benham and Charles Fay briefly crossed. He had spent several successful summers climbing in the Rocky Mountains. In fact he was so successful that the Geographical Board of Canada asked him to select a mountain to take his name. He chose one known as Heejee and was determined to be the first to reach the top. But Gertrude Benham had the same idea.

On 19 July 1904, Gertrude and her guide, Christian Kaufmann, reached the top of a mountain which they thought was Heejee. Upon their return, however, they were told that that particular mountain was called something else. They decided to try again the next day but, unknown to Gertrude, Charles Fay and his guide Hans Kaufmann, Christian's brother, were planning to climb Heejee that day as well.

Both groups set out on 20 July but Charles Fay and Hans Kaufmann found the snow conditions difficult and had to turn back. Gertrude and Christian were successful. Charles Fay was annoyed and later wrote in a letter, 'Hans Kaufmann led me, against my wishes, up Consolation Valley instead of taking my advice to go round Moraine Lake, while Christian led Miss Benham straight to the top of the mountain.'

Some people said that the Kaufmann brothers had wanted Gertrude to get to the top first and Hans had therefore taken Charles Fay on a route which took more time. Although this is a good story, no documents exist to prove this actually happened and it was never thought that Gertrude had any knowledge of it.

Disappointed, Charles Fay asked if he could choose a different mountain to take his name and chose Mount Shappee, but then found out that Gertrude and Christian had climbed that one as well. At this point Charles Fay agreed to have his name attached to Heejee, as he had originally wanted. He finally climbed to its top on 5 August 1904. Half a century later, his grandson climbed the north-eastern side of the mountain, by then known as Mount Fay. No other climber had ever managed to do this.

Gertrude Benham then travelled to New Zealand and Japan to do more climbing before going home to England, spending time in Australia and India on the way. Charles Fay made many more successful climbs. The first hut built in the Canadian Rockies to shelter climbers was called the Fay Hut. It was built in 1927 but unfortunately was destroyed in a forest fire in 2003.

Questions 21–25

Read the text and questions below.

For each question, mark the correct letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet.

At home in Venice by Francesco da Mosto

I was born in Venice, one of the most popular tourist destinations in Italy, and studied architecture at university here. Though I have also spent time away, I have always come back because it's my home.

In Venice, there are no roads, only canals, so you have to get around on foot or by boat. I live on a canal in the Rialto area in a house that was built in 1588 for the Muti family, who were merchants in the silk trade. In the mid-eighteenth century, it was home to the Vezzi family, who made things like plates and bowls in fine china and became rich sending these around the world. These merchants' houses in Venice are like palaces. Their owners had to have space to show off their goods, but the building also had to be an office, a factory, a store and a home. My house came into our family in 1919, when it was bought by my grandfather. He died before I was born but he was the director of a museum where I often do research on old documents. On some of these, I've seen notes in his handwriting, so, in a strange way, I met him through these documents.

Sadly, the population of Venice has dropped from 120,000 in the 1950s to about 60,000 now. This doesn't include the thousands of tourists who come to visit. I welcome the tourists but unless something is done to stop everyday shops like bakeries and chemists from disappearing, the city will die. I want people who love the city to come here to live and work and give Venice back a life that is not just about tourism.

21 What is the writer's main reason for writing this text?

- A to persuade more tourists to visit his city
- B to give readers the history of his home town
- C to say what he feels about his birthplace
- D to describe some important moments in his life

22 The family who first owned the writer's home

- A used to buy and sell silk.
- B produced plates and bowls.
- C were skilled architects.
- D helped to build the canals.

23 What does the writer say about his grandfather?

- A His grandfather taught him how to study documents.
- B He didn't find his grandfather's handwriting easy to read.
- C He wasn't able to get to know his grandfather personally.
- D His grandfather turned his home into a museum.

24 What is the writer's attitude to Venice today?

- A He hopes tourists will stop visiting the city.
- B He would like people to get jobs working with tourists.
- C He believes the city would benefit from having fewer inhabitants.
- D He thinks local businesses should be encouraged to stay.

25 What might the writer say about his house?

A

I have never lived anywhere else apart from in my home in the Rialto area of Venice.

B

My house is on a canal in Venice and my family, starting with my grandfather, have lived there since 1919.

C

We don't know who lived in the house before 1588 but it was owned by merchants from then until the eighteenth century.

D

The house was made bigger in the mid-eighteenth century because the owner wanted it to look like a palace.
