Food around the world

Weddings

Italians eat doughnuts in the shape of bowties for good luck. They also eat sugared almonds when they hope for a baby. Many years ago in Britain the father of the bride gave the groom 'honey mead' (a honey drink) for a whole month. In this way the couple had a month of sweetness and happiness. We have now changed the word to 'honeymoon' – the holiday a couple goes on after their wedding.

Birthdays

When a child is born in China, the father gives red eggs to his friends and family – an even number for a girl and an odd number for a boy.

The birthday party started in Europe in the Middle Ages. People were afraid of ghosts and bad spirits on their birthdays. Friends and family came to visit you with presents to stop them.

In Mexico people fill a paper animal with sweets. Children close their eyes and hit the animal until the sweets fall out. Then everybody eats the sweets.
