

Writing – Reviews

■ A review is a short description of a book, film, play, website, magazine, concert, game, TV programme, shop etc. It is written to inform readers and to give them our opinion/recommendation. ■ Reviews can be formal or informal, depending on the target audience and the publication. e.g. If we write for a lighthearted magazine such as a school magazine, we use informal style. ■ They can appear as articles in magazines/newspapers or as part of a letter/email. ■ The introduction should contain some background information about the book, film, play, book etc (i.e the name of the author/director, type, setting, name of main characters etc). ■ The main body normally consists of two paragraphs: one about the main points of the plot of the film, book etc we are reviewing in chronological order; the other contains general comments on the plot, main characters, acting, directing etc. We should never reveal the end of the story to the reader. ■ The conclusion contains our personal opinion and whether we recommend the film, book etc or not to the readers. We should justify our opinion with reasons. ■ Present tenses are mainly used to describe the plot. ■ We can use a variety of adjectives to make our review more interesting to the reader.

Read the film review. What is each paragraph about?

1

Complete the paragraph plan. Hugo is a drama adventure film based on the best-selling novel The Invention of Hugo Cabret. It is set in a Parisian railway station in the 1930s and stars Asa Butterfield, Ben Kingsley and Chloe Marez. The film is directed by the famous director Martin Scorsese.

2

Hugo (Asa Butterfield) secretly lives and maintains the clocks in a Parisian train station. The only thing Hugo has from his dead father is a robot that they were both trying to repair before his father's death. Hugo continues the repairs on the robot and at the same time searches for a key that will enable the robot to work. Little does he know that the key will uncover an even greater mystery.

3

Hugo is a tale full of imagination and adventure. The plot has unexpected twists with both touching and funny moments. The cast is excellent and the directing is superb.

4

This film is well worth seeing. The story is clever and will keep you entertained right to the end. It's a must-see!
