Dating back to the 18th century, the ao dai is a national costume of Vietnam and has always been part of the Vietnamese's identity and culture. The traditional ao dai is a long-sleeved dress with a slit along each side and is worn with loose pants. Normally, the ao dai is made of the finest silk or soft fabrics which enhance the beauty of the wearer as well as ensuring their comfort. Although it has undergone a number of changes in designs over time, the elegance and beauty of the dress never fades. In the past, ao dai was worn by both Vietnamese men and women. These days, most Vietnamese men just wear ao dai on some formal occasions such as in their weddings or during the Tet holiday. Ao dai is more popular among Vietnamese women though many of them choose to switch to western clothing style when they are at work, mostly for their own convenience.
