One summer Sunday 20 years ago, I was wandering in a park near my grandma's house. The people around me were enjoying themselves. Some were chatting, others were reading and some others were cycling or playing catch. Although there was some gentle wind, I felt rather hot after walking for a while and was dreaming of a cold drink or something to cool my throat. Suddenly, I heard a cheerful call of a lady: "Anyone wants an ice-cream? Come on. Come on." A dozen people rushed to her and she happily handed each person one big ice cream. Oh, my favorite peppermint flavor! I walked towards her and joined the group. When it was my turn, the lady stopped and asked: "Who are you?" Well, I had been mistaken. She had been handing out ice creams to her family members!
