I took a walk along the beach, feeling the sun's warmth on my skin and the sand under my feet. As I walked, I noticed a beautiful shell on the ground. I picked it up and examined it, amazed at its unique shape and colors.

As I looked around, I noticed that every shell on the beach was different. They were all special, just like people. This made me stop and think about my own life.

I had always had trouble in socializing and comparing myself to others. I felt like I was never good enough, and it had affected how I see myself negatively. But as I held the shell in my hand, I realized that it was important to be myself.

I didn't need to fit in or seek the approval of others. I just needed to be true to myself and appreciate my own uniqueness. With this fresh understanding, I felt a sense of peace and acceptance wash over me. I realized that true happiness came from within, and I didn't need anyone else's approval to be happy.

From that day on, I have lived my life with confidence and learn the accept the way I am. I didn't let the opinions of others bother me. From my walk, I had learned a valuable lesson that would stay with me for the rest of my life.

6. What is the main topic of the story?
- A. A casual trip to the beach.
 - B. The selfishness of the writer.
 - C. The uniqueness of seashells.
 - D. A walk with a valuable lesson.
