1 CULTURE

In North America, people with full-time jobs usually work eight hours a day. The hours of a typical office job are 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Many people also work part time. Some people work two or more part-time jobs. People in North America usually change jobs several times in their lives. The average person also changes careers - not just jobs - two or three times.

VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

Unit 2: I love my job!

Lisa, a film student, interviews several people about their jobs for a school project.

Lisa: Hi, I'm Lisa, and I'm a film student. I want to make a movie about jobs, but jobs that we usually don't think about every day. Let's take a look at the jobs that make our world go 'round.

* * *

Tim: My name's Tim. I'm a mover. I help people move their entire lives from their old home to their new home.

Lisa: How do you feel about your job?

Tim: I really like my job. Every day is different. And there are always different problems to solve: heavy furniture, expensive items, small staircases. Moving pianos is very difficult.

Lisa: How do you spend your day?

Tim: I pack boxes, carry items, and organize the truck. Sometimes I drive the truck, but that's the easy part. My job is tough sometimes, but it's a lot of fun. I love to drive this big truck!

* * *

Sasha: My name's Sasha, and I teach dance. I usually teach three classes a day. That's about five hours. I really love my job. I get to meet lots of people, and I help them keep fit and be healthy.

Lisa: Do you work all day?

Sasha: No. Most of my classes are in the evening. I usually get home late. Would you like to learn a move?

Lisa: Sure!

* * *

Lisa: Hi. Do you have a minute?

Chris: Sure.

Lisa: What's your name, and what do you do?

Chris: My name is Chris, and I drive a cab.

Lisa: Do you like your job?

Chris: Most days, yes.

Lisa: What don't you like about your job?

Chris: I work long hours. I work at night sometimes, too. And there is the traffic.

Lisa: Sounds interesting. Hey, can you give me a ride?

Chris: OK. Hop in.

* * *

Lisa: Today, I'm with Brian. ... Hi, Brian.

Brian: Hi.

Lisa: So, what do you do?

Brian: I'm a waiter.

Lisa: And when do you start?

Brian: I start work at five.

Lisa: Where do you work?

Brian: I work here in this restaurant. I wait tables. It's an important job, because people don't always have time to cook. They're very hungry, and they want to relax and enjoy their meal. It's a difficult job, but I like it.

* * *

Lisa: Those were all interesting jobs – some of them a little bit tougher than others, but all hard work: jobs that make our world go 'round.
