Many years ago while I was living in India, I was invited to a reception at the embassy*. When I arrived some of the guests were sitting around the dinner table eating. Others were drinking or chatting. A few couples were dancing while a group of musicians were playing waltzes*. All of a sudden the hostess's face became pale. No one noticed but* me since* everyone was now listening to an old colonel talking about his army expériences. She called the maid* who left the room and came back holding a bowl of milk.

She placed it on the veranda. I understood immediately what was happening. The milk was for a cobra which was hiding somewhere in the room. The guests were still chatting and having fun, drinking their coffee or smoking their cigars when I saw the cobra crawl across the floor and onto the veranda. While the maid was closing the veranda door the cobra was already drinking the milk. I was trembling when I asked the hostess how she knew there was a cobra in the room. « Because a few minutes ago, » she whispered, « it was crawling across my foot ». And we both joined the other guests who were still enjoying the meal and each other's company.

Help :

an embassy : une ambassade - a waltz : une valse – a maid : une employée de maison – crawl : ramper – since : puisque – whisper : chuchoter – but me= except me -
