

Underground Cities

In Cappadocia, Turkey, there are over 200 ancient cities under the ground. Some of these cities are about three thousand years old. There are secret passages between the cities. The passages are sometimes many kilometers long. Nobody lives there anymore but a lot of people visit them and they are very famous.

They are a tourist attraction.

In the past, however, there were thousands of people living in the underground cities. There were houses, kitchens, shops, churches, schools and places to keep animals and food. What was the reason for these mysterious places? Three thousand years ago, people were frightened of the cold winters and of the wild animals above the ground. Years later, people were frightened of the Romans, and the cities were good places to hide.

It probably wasn't fun living for months, or even years, in these dark places. There wasn't any electricity and there weren't any sports centers, stadiums or other exciting places to go. But today, Cappadocia is an amazing place to visit.
