A new way to shop

Tom Algie is a shopkeeper from Settle, North Yorkshire. He runs a small hardware store called Practically Everything. It sells useful bits and pieces for the house and for doing DIY. (1)

Last year, Tom faced a problem when it came to the Christmas holidays. He wanted to give himself, and his staff, time off to enjoy the holidays. (2) What if one of them needed to buy something when the shop was closed?

It didn't take him long to come up with a solution that suited everyone. He decided to leave the shop open and use an honesty box. He left a note telling shoppers who came into the shop on 26th December to serve themselves. (3) Amazingly, his plan worked. The honesty box was made out of a funnel and a plastic cereal box. (4) 'It said 'Please choose the items you want and place the money inside. Merry Christmas!'

When Tom returned to the shop at 4.15 p.m. to close up, he could only see £5.00 in the box and was a bit disappointed. However, he soon realized that the long tube of the funnel was full of money. (5) He was surprised and delighted to find that the shop had made £187.66.

- A quick shake of the tube was all that was needed to show him just how much he had earned that day. 5
- A He asked them to leave their payment in a special container he'd prepared. _____
- B But he didn't want to disappoint his loyal, local customers. _____
- C Tom recently tried out something very different in his shop. _____
- D These types of shop are very popular in rural areas. _____
- E He put it behind the counter with a note. _____
