Yesterday, Time Peake finally come back to Earth with a bit of a bump! Tim started his descent from the ISS using the Soyuz capsule, which travels the 250 miles back to Earth. Once back inside Earths atmosphere, strong winds battered the Soyuz and the capsule ended up lands in Zhezkazgan, Kazakhstan on its side when departing the capsule, russian Astronaut Training Agency stated that 'the boys looked a little green', which is hardly surprising given the fact that the capsule Travels at 25 times the speed of light and the astronauts wud experience up to 5G. The landing was well cool to watch from the ground for those lucky enough to be there. Tim Peake was first to get out from the Soyuz and (after taking a minute to steady himself) waves to photographers and had his thumbs up. Tim described the journey as, "The best ride ever!" However, judging from his face it may also have been the roughest ride ever, too!
