It was a typical Monday morning. The sun blazed away while my teacher droned away. I 1. _____ opening my mouth wide as a 2. _____. My eyes were 3. _____ and my eyelids felt heavy as 4. _____. I struggled to keep them open. Miss. Rudy had the talent to lull anyone to sleep. She's that boring. "Okay class, I would be leaving for a while. Please behave!" With that announcement, my teacher Miss Rudy waltzed out of the classroom. I was expecting today to be just like any other day. Little did I know, how ugly the day would turn out.

FORESHADOW

CONFLICT

It all commenced with an innocent tap on my shoulder. "Guess what I got?" Jia Hui, my best friend whispered. She proceeded to whip out something shiny. It was a brand new iPhone. It gleamed under the blaring fluorescent lights of our classroom, attracting everyone's attention. "It's cost an arm and leg, guys! Luckily, my dad's rich" Jia Hui bragged. Jia Hui, was the perfect little girl. She was rich. She was born with a a silver spoon in her mouth. Immediately, everyone flocked to her like bees to honey. As her ardent fans circled around her, something brimmed inside of me. It was resentment. Mei, my classmate, green with envy, sneered. "What a show-off. Don't you just hate that she's proud as a peacock. She gets everything served on a silver platter! I couldn't agree more. Jia Hui does get everything served in a silver platter. Even though, she was my best friend, even I could not help but feel green with envy.

PROBLEM

I didn't make my pangs of envy obvious. "Jia Hui is a nice girl." I defended her. "Really? She's using you as a stooge to show off." Mei replied. I 5. _____ my eyebrows together, forming 6. _____ lines. My eyes 6. _____ upwards as I thought deeply. Mei was right. The only time Jia Hui ever wanted to be around me was when she had something new to brag about. "We've got to teach her a lesson!" Mei glowered. Absent minded, I nodded.

CLIMAX

The recess bell rang and everyone made a beeline to the canteen. Only Mei and I were left in the classroom. Jia Hui carelessly left her brand new iPhone on her table. A sly smile spread across Mei's face. "I've got the perfect thing!" she snarled, baring her yellow teeth. She took out a bag. I regret peering into it. What I saw inside, turned my face a 7. _____ green.

It smashed into smithereens. "What else should we do?" Mei thought aloud, 10. _____ her chin. Mei, then grabbed a few mealworms and spread it across the metallic corpse. She watched her handiwork with a slasher smile of sadistic glee on her face. Satisfied, we left for recess.

When Jia Hui came back, she was deeply saddened. Her lips quivering wildly, she asked me, "Who would do something so cruel?" I felt guilty. Her words pricked my conscience. "Whoever who broke Jia Hui's phone better own up now! Or I will check the CCTV camera" Miss Rudy warned.

PROBLEM INTENSIFIES

I fidgeted nervously in my chair. I couldn't keep still. Seeing me twitching uncomfortably in my chair, Mei hissed at me, "Pull yourself together or we'll both land in hot soup!" It was too late. My teacher gestured both of us to step forward. Guilt overwhelmed me from head to toe. I regretted my actions. "We d-did it!" I stammered.

My cheeks 11. _____ with shame. Jia Hui's face lit up in horror. I avoided 12. _____. I could see that I let her down as a friend. "To the Principal's office!" my teacher roared.

CONCLUSION

Mei was angry at me for owning up but I knew I did the right thing. I was ready to face the music for my actions. We were scolded profusely by our Principal. I dropped my head in 13. _____. How could I have done something so cruel? Jia Hui was my friend after all. As for Jia Hui, she never forgave me. She may have bragged about her possessions. However, that did not give me the right to hurt her. I learnt an important lesson that day.

LESSON

Envy can ruin friendships.
