II. Place the events in chronological order

Soldiers started shooting at people, forcing them to go to the river. Salva saw how a man was killed by a crocodile.

Ethiopian soldiers fired their guns and chased people away from the camp towards the river full of crocodiles.

An American family was waiting for Salva at the airport, and they became their own family; Chris (the father), Louise (the mother) and their 4 children.

Salva made up his mind. He would walk south, to Kenya. Crowds of other boys followed him.

One day at a time, the group made its way to Kenya, more than twelve hundred boys arrived safely.

Salva lived in the Kakuma camp and then at Ifo.

Salva was chosen, together with other eight boys, to go to United States.

Salva swam through the river crossing all obstacles; crocodiles, bullets, rain, current, screams, blood, until his toes finally touched mud.

Salva stood inside the terminal doors for a few moments, then took his first step into a new life in America.

Salva studied English with the aid worker Michael.
