3. Describe what an ostrich looks like.

4. How do ostriches get water?

5. Where do most ostriches live?

Read the following short stories and answer the following questions

Aesop's Fables

Retold by Julie Harding

The Fox and the Stork

The fox had the stork over to eat soup. The fox put the soup in a flat dish. The stork could not eat any soup. He could not reach it with his long beak. The fox ate all the soup, and the stork went hungry. The next day, the stork invited the fox over for dinner. The stork put some meat in a jar with a long neck. The stork ate easily because his long beak fit into the jar. The fox could not get to the meat. This time he went hungry. The fox admitted that he had been wrong.

The Dog and his Reflection

A dog was walking across the bridge over a stream. He had a nice piece of meat in his mouth. He looked down. He thought that he saw another dog. He thought the other dog had meat, too. He snapped at the meat in the dog's mouth. His own meat fell into the water. Then he realized it was not another dog after all. It was his reflection.

The Peacock

Peacock's strange voice made people laugh. He wished he could sing beautiful songs like the nightingale. Peacock asked the goddess of animals for a new voice. The goddess replied, "You are jealous of the nightingale but you should not be. The feathers on your neck shine with every color of the rainbow. And your tail looks as if it is covered with gems. No one has it all. The falcon is very fast. The eagle is very strong. The parrot can speak. The raven is smart. The nightingale has a pretty song. You are big and beautiful. You are special just as you are."

C. Match each story to its moral.
