- 1 Daniel Dias is a famous Paralympic athlete. He was born in Brazil in 1988 with no hands and no feet. But he showed at a young age that he was talented and determined. He took up swimming in his teens and mastered all the main swimming strokes within two months. He achieved his dream of competing in the Paralympics and was one of the leading medal winners at the Beijing Games in 2008. He won four gold medals, four
5 silver, and one bronze. Dias' achievements make him an inspiration to disabled and able-bodied young people alike. The success of Paralympic athletes like Dias on an international stage is due in part to Dr. Ludwig Guttman.

- In the 1940s, just after the Second World War, Dr. Ludwig Guttman had a dream that changed the aspirations of disabled people forever. A lot of the patients at his hospital were soldiers who were hurt during 10 the Second World War. At that time, people often used to feel ashamed of their disabilities, and they used to hide them away. It used to be almost impossible for disabled people to live ordinary lives and join in with sporting activities. Dr. Guttman's dream was to create a competition for disabled people, to give them the chance to show to their talents to the world.

- The first "International Wheelchair Games" took place in 1948 in Stoke Mandeville, UK. There were only a 15 small number of participants. By 1960, the games were a major international event and 23 countries took part. By 1988, the Paralympic Games were a regular and popular feature of the sporting calendar, and for the first time in that year they were held just after the main Olympic Games, and in the same city, Seoul.

- There are now both Winter and Summer Paralympic Games, held in the same year and the same place as the regular Olympic Games. The events draw huge crowds of disabled and able-bodied spectators. Wheelchair 20 basketball is especially popular, not because it features people who can't walk, but because it is simply a very exciting spectacle.

However, some Paralympic athletes see the existence of separate "disabled" events as a form of discrimination. In fact some, like the South African runner Oscar Pistorius, feel that true equality will only come when they can compete against able-bodied competitors in the main Olympic Games.
