A diagram of a division problem. On the left, a red box contains the number 3, with a red arrow pointing up to it. In the center, a yellow box contains the number 10, a minus sign, and a horizontal line. To the right of the yellow box, there are three red boxes for the quotient and remainder. A red arrow points from the top of the yellow box to the first red box, and another red arrow points from the bottom of the yellow box to the third red box.
