During the Renaissance, being an artist <sup>1</sup> _____ (consider) a job like any other. Painters and sculptors <sup>2</sup> _____ (teach) their profession from a very young age, by living and working with masters. In those days, artists <sup>3</sup> _____ (ask) by their patrons – churches, kings and dukes – to do specific jobs, and they <sup>4</sup> _____ (pay) for their work. Today, the life of an artist is very different. When artists create, they don't know if their work <sup>5</sup> _____ (buy) by anyone. Perhaps it <sup>6</sup> _____ (show) in a gallery one day – but they will have to pay the gallery owner for their privilege! It sounds difficult, but there's a good side to it: Renaissance artists <sup>7</sup> _____ (expect) to create exactly what their patrons wanted. Today, artists <sup>8</sup> _____ (not tell) what to do, they are free to create whatever they like.
