STRUCTURE

We use the Reported speech when we want to tell someone what another person said without using his/her exact words, adapting them to the new circumstances in which they are repeated.

A reported speech sentence has two parts:

Introductory Clause + Indirect Clause.

Example: He said that they were classmates. (Introductory clause: He said that, Indirect clause: They were classmates.)

In the introductory clause we need an introductory verb. There are about 248 verbs to introduce the reported speech in English.
