Last Thursday, the weather was beautiful. But Betty had lots of work to do that morning. She turned on her computer and started writing all the important letters on her desk.

At twelve o'clock she said to Helen, the other secretary in the room, 'We need a holiday! But we can't leave the office. What shall we do?' Helen stood up and opened the big office window. 'Let's have a holiday here!' she said. 'Turn off the computers!'

The warm light from the sun came through the open window. The two women moved their desks and put a blanket from the office cupboard on the floor. Helen fetched two glasses and a cold bottle of lemonade from the office kitchen and put a box of cookies from her bag on a big white plate. Then Helen played a CD that had birdsong music on it.

The two women sat on the blanket, had their picnic, closed their eyes and dreamed of their holidays. It was difficult to start work again that afternoon! When Betty got home her husband asked, 'Did you have a good day?' 'Yes! I wrote 48 letters,' she laughed. 'But I went on holiday too!'
