Language focus:

Talking about food and preference:

To talk about food we can use one of the following verbs:

I Like= v

I prefer =vV

I don't like= X

When we talk about things we like, we use the verb 'like'.

For example:

I like fish

When we want to say that we like something more than something else,

We use the verb 'prefer' + 'to'.

For example:

I prefer chicken to fish.

To make the negative, we use 'don't' in front of the verb. For example,

I don't like fish.

I don't prefer fish to chicken.

When ordering specific food in a restaurant, we can ask the waiter by saying:

Have you got.....?

Read the conversation below and notice the use of (have you got)

1.A: Have you got fish and French fries?
