

The Road Not Taken

by Robert Frost

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood,
And sorry I could not travel both
And be one traveler, long I stood
And looked down one as far as I could
To where it bent in the undergrowth;

Then took the other, as just as fair,
And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear;
Though as for that the passing there
Had worn them really about the same,

And both that morning equally lay
In leaves no step had trodden black.
Oh, I kept the first for another day!
Yet knowing how way leads on to way,
I doubted if I should ever come back.

I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence:
Two roads diverged in a wood, and I—
I took the one less traveled by,
And that has made all the difference.

Last week, I walked into my son's bedroom. The part of the room that was visible through the crack in the door looked _____, so I wasn't worried. Boy, was I in for a surprise. The floor was littered with everything from papers to gum wrappers to random cables for who-knows-what, which were as tangled as the _____ in a forest. No sooner had I walked two steps into the room, than I had _____ on an old Lego piece from a set his younger brother must have opened and left, strewn on the floor. His brother seemed to have made _____ to this room, because I saw tracks from our toy train set, _____ along the floor. I decided we needed to have a little chat about cleaning up messes that we make, and called him in two minutes _____.
