STARTING WORK

In recent years, job markets have become so competitive that choosing the right 1) _____ path has become crucial for many young people. The goal of most young people is to find a (2) _____ that offers some decent benefits. The most basic of these is a good (3) _____ but also includes such things as paid holiday leave, health insurance and a (4) _____ fund. But often the reality is somewhat different. Many young people are having to work for a low (5) _____ of pay, with no extra payment for (6) _____ and with the threat that they could be (7) _____ redundant at any time. It's no wonder that there is low morale among many (8) _____ these days. This has lead a growing number of young people to show (9) _____ and start up their own businesses offering a whole range of (10) _____ to people who live in their (11) _____ communities. It requires a lot of (12) _____ and some luck but it can pay off in the end.
