

BATIDO DE FRUTAS

PASOS A SEGUIR

Pictogramas: Sergio Palau. Procedencia: www.arasaac.es Licencia: CC (BY-NC-SA). Autor de la Receta: Nán González Carro.

BATIDO DE FRUTAS

INGREDIENTES

UTENSILIOS

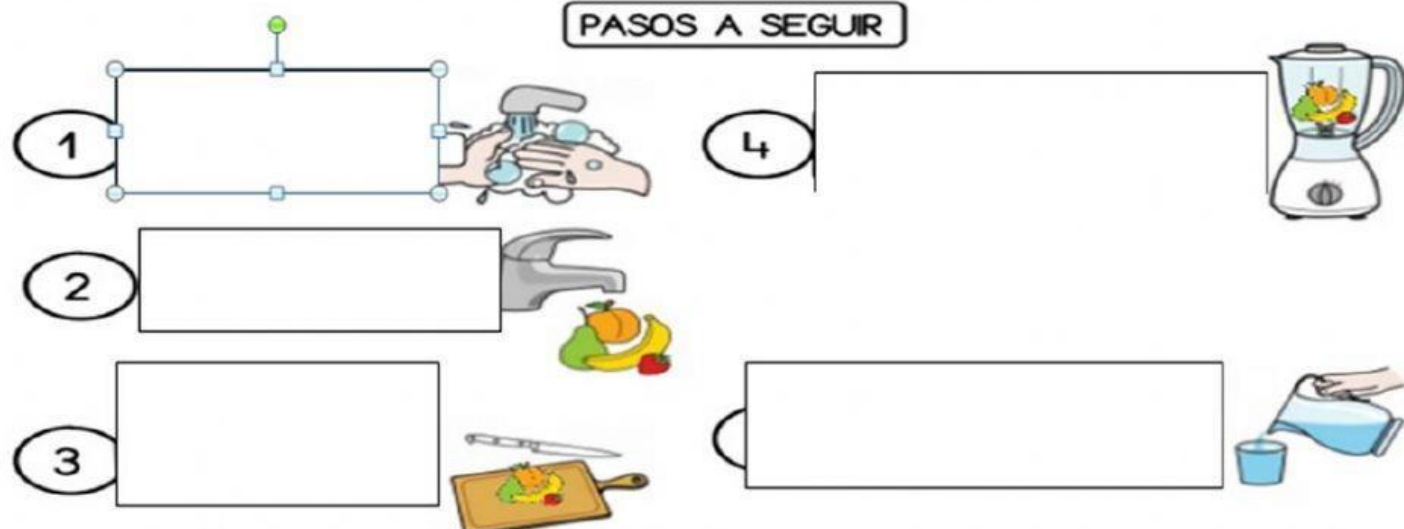

Pictogramas: Sergio Palau. Procedencia: www.arasaac.es Licencia: CC (BY-NC-SA). Autor de la Receta: Nán González Carro.

BATIDO DE FRUTAS

PASOS A SEGUIR

Pictogramas: Sergio Palau. Procedencia: www.wassan.es Licencia: CC (BY-NC-SA). Autor de la Receta: Iván González Carro.

Poner las frutas en la batidora.

Lavarse las manos.

Cortar las frutas.

Lavar las frutas.

Verter el batido en
una jarra o vaso.

the information science community, and the information science community, in turn, has been largely unresponsive to the needs of librarians.

As a result, librarians have been left with a choice: to continue to work in isolation, or to work in partnership with information scientists. The former option is clearly not a viable long-term solution, and the latter option is the only one that offers a realistic chance of success. However, the success of this partnership will depend on the willingness of both parties to engage in a genuine, two-way dialogue, and to work together to develop a shared vision of the future of the profession.

In the past, librarians have often been content to work in isolation, and to focus on their own specific tasks. However, the future of the profession lies in the hands of those who are willing to engage in a genuine, two-way dialogue, and to work together to develop a shared vision of the future of the profession.

The first step in this process is to establish a common ground. This can be done by identifying the shared values and goals of both the library and the information science community. Once this common ground has been established, the next step is to develop a shared vision of the future of the profession.

This vision should be based on the shared values and goals of both parties, and should be developed through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once this vision has been developed, the next step is to develop a plan of action to achieve this vision.

This plan should be based on the shared vision, and should be developed through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once this plan has been developed, the next step is to implement it.

Implementation of the plan should be done in a way that is consistent with the shared vision, and should be done through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once the plan has been implemented, the next step is to evaluate the results.

Evaluation of the results should be done in a way that is consistent with the shared vision, and should be done through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once the results have been evaluated, the next step is to revise the plan if necessary.

Revising the plan should be done in a way that is consistent with the shared vision, and should be done through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once the plan has been revised, the next step is to implement it again.

Implementation of the revised plan should be done in a way that is consistent with the shared vision, and should be done through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once the plan has been implemented again, the next step is to evaluate the results.

Evaluation of the results should be done in a way that is consistent with the shared vision, and should be done through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once the results have been evaluated, the next step is to revise the plan if necessary.

Revising the plan should be done in a way that is consistent with the shared vision, and should be done through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once the plan has been revised, the next step is to implement it again.

Implementation of the revised plan should be done in a way that is consistent with the shared vision, and should be done through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once the plan has been implemented again, the next step is to evaluate the results.

Evaluation of the results should be done in a way that is consistent with the shared vision, and should be done through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once the results have been evaluated, the next step is to revise the plan if necessary.

Revising the plan should be done in a way that is consistent with the shared vision, and should be done through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once the plan has been revised, the next step is to implement it again.

Implementation of the revised plan should be done in a way that is consistent with the shared vision, and should be done through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once the plan has been implemented again, the next step is to evaluate the results.

Evaluation of the results should be done in a way that is consistent with the shared vision, and should be done through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once the results have been evaluated, the next step is to revise the plan if necessary.

Revising the plan should be done in a way that is consistent with the shared vision, and should be done through a process of genuine, two-way dialogue. Once the plan has been revised, the next step is to implement it again.