An Unforgettable Mother's Day Celebration

Mother's Day was and Lisa still had not thought of the ideal gift for her mother. While she was shopping one day, it suddenly dawned on her that a she baked herself would be the perfect Mother's Day gift.

Lisa was extremely about the idea as she had never baked a cake before. However, she was sure that as long as she followed the recipe exactly, she would be able to produce a black forest cake.

While her mother was out, Lisa began her baking . As this was her first attempt, she was careful to follow the instructions closely. Finally, the cake of flour, butter, eggs and sugar was ready for the oven. As she popped the baking tin into the oven, she felt with anticipation. Exhausted by her effort, Lisa decided to take a short nap before her mother came back from work.

Later, Lisa was awakened from her sleep by the smell of something . To Lisa's horror, she had overslept by two hours! Her fears were confirmed when she saw the thick black mass in the oven.

Her mother had a good laugh when she heard what had happened. "It's all right, Lisa. It's the thought that counts," she said. Although Lisa's cake did not turn out well, she had helping her mother prepare dinner that night. On top of that, she promised her mother that she would pick up skills so that she could cook up a feast on the next Mother's Day.
